Record Append

Pathfinder provides mechanisms to load user-provided data into personal databases, thus making it searchable in conjunction with all other Pathfinder data. Additionally, appended records can then be shared with others.

Using Manual Record Append, users may add records to a personal database through the browser window. This feature enables users to create their own records by defining the date, classification, title, and text of the record. By directly typing or using cut and paste, users may add any text data they desire.

Pathfinder also supports importing an entire file into a personal database using the Import File to Personal Database function. Using this tool, any txt, doc, pdf or rtf file can be converted to text and then loaded into a personal database. Unlike the Manual Record Append, the classification, date, and title of imported records are defined by the system. Any of these can be edited later by the user.
